

Division Winemaking Company Béton American Red Wine 2022

Inspired by the French “house wines” served in Paris, Béton is an easy going blend full of raspberry, red berries, violets, and some minerality.

Division WC American Red Wine Villages "Beton" 2022 (2022)

Division Winemaking Company is a Portland, Oregon-based winery founded in 2010 by Kate Norris and Thomas Monroe, and represents a new generation of curious winemakers looking beyond the status quo to create unique wines with purpose and a story.

Determined to make minimal intervention, approachable, and balanced wines with great price to quality value, the winemakers work with terroir-expressive vineyards, focused on organic, regenerative and/or biodynamic farming.

Region: Oregon, US

Vineyard: The grapes for Béton came from several vineyards around the Northwest and while the start to the harvest was rocky, this was the first year since 2018 that all of the vineyards were harvested in ideal conditions and without complications like wildfires, mildew, or drought.

Size: 750ml x 12

Farming: Organic

Vinification: Cabernet Franc (35%), Côt (32%), Gamay (24%), Cabernet Sauvignon (5%), Pinot Noir (4%). The Béton blend features several grape varieties and fermentation techniques that all come together once blended after 5-6 months of aging. The heart of this wine is the Loire clone Cabernet Franc from the Applegate Valley fermented mostly whole cluster with natural yeasts both individually and co-fermented with Côt (Malbec). A new organic site near the western edge of the Yakima brought additional Côt with a delicious floral dimension. Gamay took a larger presence this vintage and smaller quantities of Pinot Noir and Cabernet Sauvignon rounded out a special year of this wine.
